

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

A slow poke speeds up

By CHARLES CLARKSON

LARRY TIMS stood near the door of the restaurant and stared at the lively little brunette behind the cashier's desk. She repeated her words.

"Yes, I'm leaving, Larry. The Domino chain has offered me a job as relieving cashier. I'll be travelling all around."

His mouth dropped, but he managed a smile. "That sounds like a grand job, Ann. I'm sure pleased."

"Oh... well, thanks, Larry. Ann Gales turned quickly to hide the hurt in her eyes.

Larry started toward the show window, changed his mind and sat down at the soda fountain. "Halt to himself, he said slowly, "She's leaving."

Ginger, the red-headed soda jerk, glanced over. "Who, Ann? Sure, today's her last day. She just told you?" Larry nodded glumly.

Ginger was scornful. "Listen, pal. You fell for her the first time you came here to trim the windows. Not that I blame you. Ann's a peach of a kid—and a swell looker, too. But what do you do?"

"Once a week you blow in. You say hello. Then you spend the time just looking at her, so that you're sticking pins into your fingers instead of into that colored paper you can't read. Why don't you give yourself a break?"

"It's true, Larry thought sadly. All week he'd look forward to Friday, his day to do the restaurant windows. He'd plan what he was going to say—suggest calling for her after work; perhaps a drive out the parkway and a bite to eat. After that... well, he was sure things would work out all right.

But when Friday came, it was always the same. One look at those warm, smiling eyes and his courage vanished.

He tried to explain to Ginger. "You don't understand, kid. I'm not in Ann's class. She wouldn't bother with me. Besides, I don't know how to begin."

Ginger made a sour face. "Listen, chump. Just give yourself a big build-up—tell her what a great guy you are. Next thing, she's eating out of your hand."

"Not me," Larry groaned. "She's probably laugh in my face."

He went back to his work, gathering the crepe paper into fancy patterns, and pinning up the little felt letters. He glanced often toward the cashier, but the dark head never turned in his direction. He was ignored. He felt crushed, beaten.

By noon he was desperate. Sliding into a fountain seat, he beckoned the red head toward him.

"Listen, Ginger. You've got to help me. Today's my last chance. Couldn't you talk to Ann? Tell her you know, that I'd like to see her again and all that?"

Ginger shook his head decidedly. "That's no good. You've got to tell her yourself. Go on—what's stopping you?"

Ginger pucker his forehead in thought. Finally his face brightened.

"Why don't you give her a going-away present? She's sure to be pleased. After that it's strictly up to you."

Larry seemed doubtful, but a determined look grew in his eyes. "I'll do it! She can't do worse than that."

As he went by the cashier's desk, he said, "I'll be back later. Ann didn't see to hear."

That afternoon he decided on a plan. He bought a large box of chocolates, in the shape of a heart. It was a red box, tied with a silver ribbon. He drove to a quiet street, took out his material kit, and set to work.

First, he fastened the chocolate box against the car window. Then the quick fingers fashioned tiny roses out of crepe paper, and arranged them around the box. Finally, selecting felt letters from the glass, he spelled his message, "Good luck, Ann!"

He was pleased as he drove back to the restaurant and stopped opposite the door. It was nearly five o'clock. Ann couldn't miss seeing his message!

He settled down to wait. It seemed a long time, and he kept glancing at his watch. Fifteen minutes past five. Twenty. Twenty-five.

He kept looking at his handiwork, too. At first the looks were admiring. He was cheerful and happy. Slowly, however, his mood changed. Laughs and glances from passers-by didn't help any. He slumped lower in his seat.

"I'm crazy," he thought dimly. "She'll think I'm ridiculous... can't go through with it."

He decided desperately. "I'll go in, say goodbye sensibly, and drive away before she can see this and laugh at it."

He ran across the sidewalk and through the door. Ann was nowhere in sight.

Ginger gave him a pitying look when he saw him.

"You're late, chum. She left early."

"She... left... early?" he repeated dazedly.

"Yeah. She seemed upset about something. Kept fussing around that window you worked on this morning. Finally she asked the boss if she could go home."

Larry's shoulders sagged as he turned to the cashier. "There couldn't be anything wrong with his display."

At first everything seemed in order. But there was something about the letters had been changed! He spelled out the words, "So long, Larry," it said.

"Why?" he thought wildly. "She likes me! She must... or she wouldn't have bothered. If only I'd seen her..."

He looked sadly out at the car. There was someone standing there, hands pressed against the glass, staring at his design. A slight little figure with jet black curls—Ann! He tore through the store and out into the street.

She turned slowly, giving him the loveliest smile he had ever seen.

"Larry! How wonderful! You did this for me—and I hardly thought you knew I existed!"

"You thought... I didn't know... I repeated numbly. "You mean..."

"She made a self-effacing little gesture. "Oh, I know there's no reason why you should. But I hoped that some day you'd get around to saying something more than 'good morning' to me. And today you told me you were glad I was leaving! When you didn't come back this afternoon to say goodbye, I was so upset I went home. But I had to come back, in case you did show up. You must think I'm awfully silly!"

His chest seemed to swell, and there was new dignity and poise in his voice. "Not silly, Ann. I think your grand. Confidently, he leaned over and murmured, "Ann, would you like to come for a drive—out the parkway, perhaps—and then go somewhere for dinner?"

Ann looked up with shining eyes. "How could I say no?" she whispered. "You're so marvelous!"

Junior Art Exhibition opens Nov. 9

REGINA. — The Saskatchewan Arts Board is again sponsoring a Junior Art Exhibition opening on Wednesday, November 9, at the Norman MacKenzie Art Gallery in Regina, according to Miss Norah McCullough, Saskatchewan Arts Board secretary. This will be the fourth exhibition of its kind to be held in the province.

Miss McCullough requests art teachers of schools, principals, and all those interested in the encouragement of art education to especially take note of this fall exhibition.

Teachers are asked to retain students' work for submission to this Junior Art Exhibition, since it had not been possible to have printed notices circulated before the end of the school term, Miss McCullough said. Printed notices and entry forms giving full particulars will be sent out late this September. Entries should be large in size and the student's own original work. No copies will be accepted.

The exhibition will be open to anyone, whether a student or not, from 13 to 21 years of age, complying with the regulations.

Substantial prizes are being offered for the young people sending their art efforts to the Junior Art Exhibition. Miss McCullough added. Generous awards have been contributed by a private donor and art supply dealers, and six cash purchase prizes are offered by the Saskatchewan Arts Board, amounting to approximately $200 in all.

Enquiries regarding the Junior Art Exhibition for 1955 should be directed to the Saskatchewan Arts Board, 1100 Broad Street, Regina.

Funny and Otherwise

It isn't hard to meet expenses these days. As a matter of fact, you run into them every time you turn around.

The elevator girl had a word for everybody.

"I'll bet you see some strange sights," she said to the window washer.

"The index," replied the man with the bucket, belt and sponges. "Why, there's an offense for the fourth floor where everybody's always working."

She waited at the corner, joyously—then pensively—then expectantly—then casually—then anxiously—and an hour passed.

"Man," she said, "is a brute, faithless and untrue, incapable of keeping a promise."

Two hundred yards down the street he said the same things about women. She was at the wrong corner.

Teacher (to tardy boy): "Why are you so late?"

Boy: "Well, I always obey the laws."

Teacher: "Well just what do you mean?"

Boy: "There's a sign down the road that says, 'School ahead, go slow.'"

Little Betty was crying bitterly. Her mother asked her what was the matter.

"My new shoes hurt me."

"No wonder. You have them on the 'wrong feet,'" replied mother.

Betty kept on bawling. "I haven't any other feet," she said.

PICNIC SAFETY Meals eaten out of doors in the country taste twice as good as those eaten indoors but the picnic which includes a campfire can end in a costly and dangerous blaze unless care is taken to ensure that the fire is completely extinguished and that matches or cigarette butts are not left burning.

Forest fires start quickly and often at the cost of wild life and human injury. Fires should never be lighted where there is dried grass or vegetable matter; the site for the fire (which should be as small as possible) should be on rock, sand or mineral earth, so that the embers cannot cause a wide spreading fire underground.

How to Reduce Swollen Painful Piles Here is a safe, clean, easy way to get rid of piles from the nagging distress of swollen, painful piles without the inconvenience of ointments, pile pipes or suppositories.

The secret is in taking just one small box of Ham-Bulb every day, two or three times a day. Works through the digestive tract, relieves itching, soreness and swelling. Piles melt away and never return.

If you suffer monthly when Ham-Bulb opens you so much. Get a package today. Use for yourself how nice Ham-Bulb is to use, how effective it is and how much more "worth it" will quickly bring you. All drug stores. Low cost. Money refunded if you are not 100% pleased.

THE TILLERS NOW WHAT'S WRONG? THIS WEATHER! IF IT DOESN'T RAIN, IT'S TOO HOT. IF IT DOES RAIN, IT'S TOO COLD. GOODNESS! NEVER SATISFIED!

FIRST YOU COMPLAIN IT'S TOO HOT. THEN AGAIN BEING HOT. EHT WHEN IT RAINS, THEN AGAIN BEING HOT. LAST SUMMER DROUGHT! DROUGHT!

Plain facts from young writers give frank reports on history

REGINA. — The children of Summerberry have put it down for all to see: The town has a "notable group of ladies," the television reception is just so-so; a lot of the local cows have Bang's disease, and in 1946 Pete Hewitt's garage burned down, writes Don Hamright for Canadian Press.

The 20-odd school students at Summerberry, a typical Saskatchewan farm town 75 miles east of Regina, included these and other snippets in a scrapbook-style history of their community.

Written by a dozen different hands in cautious, easily-legible longhand is the Summerberry history is typical of hundreds which have or will be done this year as the school population's special contribution to the province's golden jubilee celebrations.

More than 4,000 schools in the province were expected to participate in the program. Although most histories will be written in longhand, several already have come off commercial presses and others have been typed and mimeographed.

From the thousands of pages of copy produced, school superintendents will cull those most valuable to the general history of the province and these will be put on microfilm by the provincial archivist, Dr. F. E. Thomas, and his staff.

Most of the histories open in the same way—"Our town is situated in the heart of the greatest wheat belt in Canada" and "It is here that our story begins." Then they plunge into chronological heap of facts and figures on churches, auto dealers, pool halls, and a cow decapitated by the morning train back in 1913.

ALWAYS LOOK TO IMPERIAL FOR THE BEST

WITH THE District Agriculturist

By J. S. Duncan

Farm Labour: It is expected that there will be a movement of farm workers from Ontario to the west again this fall. If those farmers who expect to need help at harvest time would let me know soon, it would be a great help in estimating the number of men who will be required in this district. Those who get their names in first will get first chance when the men start to arrive. As the number of men brought into the district is based on an estimate of the number needed, it is to everyone's advantage for those who expect to need men to get their names on the list.

Creep Feeding for Calves: While it is not too common a practice yet to creep feed calves there are many Stockmen who feel that it is a paying practice. Getting the calves eating a bit of grain now will mean that as the cows dry up the calves will keep gaining and will not suffer a setback at weaning time. This means heavier, thriftier calves to finish or grow out as you prefer.

To be used on the range a creep has to be near to the watering place or salt lick or some place where the cattle go regularly. It usually doesn't take the calves long to get used to the creep and start eating.

A calf creep is illustrated in cattle shelters and equipment a catalogue of plans for beef which is available at this office. School of Agriculture

And Economics These schools provide a wonderful combination of Academic and Practical training for the future farmer and home-maker. In addition there is plenty of sports and social activities. For the farm boy or girl who would like to take some extra schooling but also wants some practical training, these schools offer a great opportunity.

The term is set to fit in with farm work as it starts shortly after the middle of October and ends early in April. Full information regarding the courses, costs, etc., can be had by writing to The Principal, Provincial School of Agriculture and Home Economics at Olds, Vermilion or Fairview.

DONATIONS

Jarrow News

Edith and Evelyn Theroux of Sedgewick are guests at the Sonett and Theroux homes for a couple of weeks.

Margaret and Kenneth Orzechski are attending the Farm Week at the School of Agriculture at Vermilion this week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Belko and family of Winnipeg were guests at the W. Lockhart home last week. Mrs. Belko was the former Dorothy Lockhart and she found a great many changes since she was last here, about 18 years ago.

Karen Duhaime of Wainwright spent last week at the W. Orzechski home.

Mack Bellon and James Beer were Sunday visitors at Bonnyville.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Smith and family took in the Exhibition last Monday.

Rev. John A. Theroux of the Nazarene Church of Edmonton was the guest speaker at the church on Sunday. Those who were privileged to hear him will never forget his message on "Enoch walked with God."

The Jarrow W.A. wish to thank all who helped in any way to make their supper so successful. Special thanks to Mr. R. Gay for his showing of colored slides which included scenes from Ontario, Hardisty, Wainwright, Irma, Melbrae and even those from Jarrow showed up pretty good. We are all looking forward to another showing of pictures.

The Jarrow W.A. will meet at the home of Mrs. W. R. Meakin on Tuesday, August 2 at 2:30. Hostesses Mrs. G. Meakin and Mrs. W. R. Meakin. A good attendance is requested.

Rev. John A. Theroux and family of Edmonton, Wm. Theroux, Edith and Evelyn of Sedgewick, Mr. and Mrs. C. Sonett and boys and Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Smith and family were all dinner and supper guests at the G. Theroux home on Sunday following the morning service. Due to the muddy condition of the roads, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Astley of Minburn were unable to join the gathering.

Other visitors at the Exhibition included Pat and Marilyn Matthew.

H. McGuire spent the weekend in the city. There will be an F.U.A. meeting at the Hall on Monday, August 1 at 8 p.m. All members and interested parties urged to attend.

Mr. R. Gay received the sad news Tuesday p.m. that his grandmother, Mrs. Gay Sr., had passed away at Oshawa, Ont. Plans were made from the East for him to fly home for the funeral. C. Sonett took him to the city in time for the plane to make connections in Saskatoon. He will be back in time for this Sunday's service.

Mike, William and George Rawluk recently attended the funeral of their brother, John Rawluk of Vancouver. Much sympathy expressed to them in their bereavement.
